

Amber gives Chyna advice on love

Amber Rose has been giving Blac Chyna relationship advice. The 27-year-old model recently started dating reclusive reality TV star Rob Kardashian, 28, and Amber revealed she and Blac rely on each other for advice when it comes to love. She told Mirror Celeb: "I think us being best friends we give each other advice, it's not just me schooling her. We've both learned a lot from our past relationships and the mistakes we've made in life and the good things we've done in life. We're very loving and compassionate girls. I feel like people don't really know that about us. We love really hard. We're good people. We learn as we go." Until recently, Amber had an acrimonious relationship with some of Rob's siblings as her ex Kanye West is now married to Rob's sister Kim Kardashian West. However, Amber and Kim recently put their differences behind them and Blac is reportedly so impressed she is hoping she can iron out her differences with Rob's younger sister Kylie Jenner, who is dating her ex-fiancé Tyga. An insider said: "Blac Chyna thinks what Amber and Kim did was a real mature thing to do. Blac Chyna would like to do the same with the Kardashian family. "She would really like to talk to Kylie. She is fine with Tyga and Tyga dating at this point. She hopes they understand how she felt when it all happened between Tyga and Kylie."

Stewart inspired Wood to have more children

Rod Stewart claims he inspired Ronnie Wood to have more children. The 71-year-old rocker has taken the credit for his 68-year-old former Faces bandmate and his wife Sally Humphreys deciding to start a family, revealing he and his spouse Penny Lancaster talked them into it. Rod said: "I must admit it was me and Penny that was pushing for them to have children - I'm sure Sally wanted them but she just needed a spokesman and she got it in me." And the 'Maggie May' singer can't help but be amused at the thought of how much his old pal's life is going to change when he becomes a dad to twins very soon. Speaking on UK TV show 'Lorraine', he added: "He doesn't know what's going to happen to him. I laugh every time I think of it." Rod has eight children with five women, and is an older dad to young kids himself as he has sons Alistair, 10, and Aiden, five, with Penny. Ronnie is already father to four grown-up children, son Jesse - his son with first wife Krissy - and Leah, Tyrone and Jamie whom he raised with second spouse Jo Wood. Rod has previously suggested The Rolling Stones guitarist should have a vasectomy once his twins enter the world so he cannot procreate any more. He quipped: "I have not had the snip. Ask Ronnie Wood, he should have the snip. I don't know what comes out when you have the snip. I think it is just dust."

Chris Klein to be a dad

Chris Klein is to become a father for the first time. The 'American Pie' actor revealed the happy news that he and wife Laina Rose Thyfault - who he wed last August - are expecting a baby together on his 37th birthday yesterday. Sharing a photo of Laina's bump on Twitter, he wrote: "My beautiful wife Laina and I are expecting our first child. 23 weeks along. Gratefully blessed on my 37th B-Day." Chris previously admitted he was "very grateful" to have married Laina. "Laina looked beautiful. She holds herself with such grace. I am a very grateful man." The newlyweds decided to get married at the Rainbow Ranch in Montana, even though they're both originally from Texas. Chris previously explained: "We fell in love with the area and the nature. Luckily, we have families who love to travel and also love nature, so it was the perfect spot for us." The Hollywood hunk - who was previously in a relationship with 'Batman Begins' actress Katie Holmes - first met Laina at a mutual friend's wedding and proposed to the blonde beauty in Venice Beach, California, back in December 2014.

Woodley doesn't watch movies

The 'Divergent' actress may have carved out a successful career by starring in a number of successful movies but she has admitted she prefers to snuggle up with a book after a long day on set rather than get engrossed in a movie. She explained: "I don't really watch any other things. I don't know how people find time to watch movies. I would love to watch more. At the end of the day it's either watch movies or read a book and generally the novel wins." But, if the 24-year-old star does find the time to slip on a film, she prefers to watch her movies because she can critique her performance in order to improve for her next role. She said: "I don't know if it's enjoyable but it's something I'm grateful for. It's a way of critiquing what I do, so I know better for the next round how I can adjust and grow my strengths." Shailene shot to fame after she starred in 'The Fault in Our Stars' as cancer patient Hazel Grace Lancaster in 2014 and, despite her down to earth attitude to life, she has admitted she was concerned fame would go to head and ruin her life. Speaking to the Metro newspaper, she said: "I think at first I was worried about my anonymity. Then I realized my life hadn't changed and as long as I could stay true to that I don't think any external force could really affect me."

West is considering joining Instagram

The 'Bound 2' hitmaker - who is known for his dramatic outbursts on Twitter - is toying with the idea of making an account on the photo-sharing site but under the condition his fans don't bombard him with requests on what to post. Taking to his Twitter account last night, he said: "I was thinking about getting an Instagram but only on one condition..... no one can ask me or try to tell me what to Instagram... It's my art..." "My tweets are a form of contemporary art only compromised by people trying to tell me what to tweet and not to tweet... Non artist trying to grab the paint brush... (sic)." The 38-year-old rapper's teasing remarks come just a week after his wife Kim Kardashian West, with whom he has two children North, two, and Saint, three months, attempted to break the internet by posting a raunchy selfie on the site. The brunette beauty, 35, was slapped with backlash after she uploaded the raunchy shot - her completely naked with two slim black bars strategically placed across her breasts and private parts - online. And this isn't the first time Kim has shocked her fans with a seductive picture as she also pulled a similar stunt shortly after giving birth to her baby girl North two years ago.

Cage skips the SXSW due to illness

Nicolas Cage skipped the SXSW premiere of his movie 'The Trust' after suffering dizziness and high blood pressure. The 52-year-old star was heading to Austin, Texas for the annual film and music festival but suddenly fell ill and was forced to cancel his appearance at the screening. A spokesman for SXSW said: "This was definitely unforeseen. He had dizziness before boarding and they checked his blood pressure, which was high." The 'Face/Off' actor was checked over by airport medical staff at Las Vegas, where he was due to take off in time to attend the premiere on Sunday at the Arts & Cinema Centre, but it was decided he shouldn't get on the flight, though he is now on the road to recovery. A representative for the star added: "We all felt it was better for him not to get on the plane since flying could make things worse. Thankfully he is now much better." The event was instead attended by co-star Elijah Wood and pop star Sky Ferreira, who has a supporting role in the movie, which is about corrupt cops who plan to rob a vault full of drug money. Meanwhile, Nicolas has just signed up to star in crime thriller 'Vengeance: A Love Story' in the role of a vigilante cop, and is set to start shooting later this year.

Elba has 'good grasp' of himself

Idris Elba finally has a "good grasp" of who he is. The 43-year-old actor - who has children Isan, 14, and Winston, 23 months, from past relationships - had a good time when he was younger but lacked direction in his life, and now he is secure in himself, he is having "real fun". He said: "I had a lot of fun in my 20s but I didn't really know what I was doing in my life back then. I started to grow into myself in my 30s. Now in my 40s, I have a really good grasp of who I am. It's more interesting when you feel things are falling into place. That's where the real fun comes from." The 'Jungle Book' actor credits his parents for helping him stay out of trouble while growing up in a deprived part of London. He said: "I had parents who were very protective and looked out for me. They knew what was going on in the streets and I wasn't allowed to hang out with any of those people. I always had a lot of respect for how hard they worked to provide for our family. I may have been a very big, strong kid but it was being mentally tough that really helped me succeed."

Mariah Carey's aides made a 3am trip to a supermarket when she touched down in Glasgow. The 'We Belong Together' hitmaker sent her assistants to a nearby shop to buy a stack of Disney DVDs for her four-year-old twins Morocco and Monroe as she rehearsed for her upcoming tour date in the Scottish capital. A source told The Sun newspaper: "Mariah didn't land in Glasgow until 10pm and went straight to the arena to get everything ready for tonight. She told her entourage to make sure the children - who were being cared for by a nanny while she did her thing on stage - had a huge stack of DVDs they could choose from. "She specially told them to stock up on the most recent Disney flicks, including the Minions films, and warned no movies with violence. The kids headed back to the hotel at 4am, before Mariah herself rocked up an hour later. She slept pretty much all day yesterday and barely left her suite." And whilst she ensured her children had the best of everything, no expense was spared for herself either as she rented the penthouse suite at a five-star hotel in the city. Not one to scrimp, Mariah even asked for a crate of Moet champagne to be delivered to the venue ahead of her rehearsals. — Bang Showbiz
